Editorial PPCLI Jubilee Memorable

1914 - 1964

A span of military history covering 45 years will be highlighted at Hamilton Gault Barracks, Saturday, September 18th, when Lady Patricia Ramsay, 78 year old Colonel-in-Chief of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry places a Wreath of Laurel on the Regimental Colour of the Second Battalion, in honour of the Regiment's exploits in two world wars and the Korean conflict.

Lady Patricia enacted a similar ceremony 45 years ago after the regiment had returned to England at the end of World War I. In 1919, on the past parade prior to the Battalion's return to Canada, Lady Patricia, with the permission of King George V, placed on the original Colour a Wreath of Laurel in honour of the Regiment's exploits in the first World War.

Last month Lady Patricia honored the First Battalion PPCLI by placing a Wreath of Laurel on the Regimental Colour during a Trooping the Colour ceremony August 10, 1964, at Fort MacLeod, Germany.

September 17 - 20 will be four heart-warming and most rewarding days for the Second Battalion PPCLI at Griesbach. The presence of their gracious Colonel-in-Chief, Lady Patricia and the veterans of her Regiment will make every event of the Jubilee Celebrations especially memorable.

will disappear Several "Letters to the Editor"

Sand

Several "Letters to the Editor" from Griesbach residents have complained about the dusty sand conditions on roads and driveways causing excess grime being tracked into homes.

A seal coat (oil tar) spread on roads and driveways and then covered with chip gravel or sand, preserves the surface for a much longer period thus keeping maintenance cost to a minimum. No problem arises in areas where traffic is heavy, however, this is not the case in private driveways where the family car only drives over the surface a few times a day.

A spokesman for the Engineers says that after 10 to 14 days, the excess sand can be removed from the driveways, but the contract does not call for the removal of the excess sand, to further reduce the cost of maintenance,

We may point out that a couple of bags of sand in your car trunk adds weight and gives better traction for your car in winter.

FAMOUS CANADIAN ARMY BADGES

Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry

An annulus (circle) containing the cypher and coronet of Her Royal Highness Princess Patricia and the whole surmounted by the Crown is the cap badge of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

The coronet is that of a Royal Princess and the cypher "VP" is for Victoria Patricia, while the crown attests to the Regiment's allegiance to Queen and country.

Home station for the PPCLI is Edmonton. Alta

MILITARY SURREALISM

The 2nd Exitation PPCLI Trooping the Colour, scheduled to take place September 19th at Hamilton Gault Barracks, has become an event of outstanding pageantry and precision that many observers consider an every day occurrence for the serviceman. It isn't. Each one of these annual affairs is the result of many hours of drill, training and practice — "Left Form! Right Form! Slow March! Quick March! Eyes Right! Eyes Front! Open Order! Close Order! Advance in Review Order!" - - - - No choreographer has had to train his ballet troop more diligently.

In our cover picture we try to convey the surrealist impression the participants of this event must have, once it is all behind them.

Che Library Corner

NEW RESIDENTS

For the information of new residents the Griesbach Community Library is located at the S.E. corner of 146 Ave, and 104 St., and is open Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 and Saturday mornings from 10:30 to 12 noon. Membership is free to all service members and their families (children must be in grade 2 or better). The library holds a wide range of all types of books for general reading and contains a small but up-to-date reference section.

BOOK DONATIONS

While initially the library was founded on donated books, the time has now come where only selected types of books are accepted. These are: Westerns; mysteries; science; fiction; childrens' books; recent or current best sellers as listed in Time Magazine or the Sunday Supplement of the New York Times. Books should be in reasonably new condition and have dust jackets. It is requested that anyone wishing to donate books bring them to the library on Saturday mornings, or, if that is not possible, to the office of the Librarian, Room 164 HQ Western Command.

CLEARANCES

On an accompanied posting the service member must surrender all membership cards, at the time of alearance, belonging to himself and his family before a library clearance can be granted. Failure to do so only results in unnecessary delays.

BOOK BRIEFS

"The Venetian Affair"

by Helen MacInnes

A masterly novel of high adventure, suspense, and love, which entangles journalist Bill Fenner in an international conspiracy and takes him from New York to Paris to Venice. Here, at its best is the inimitable blend of superlative excitement and literary skill that has won Helen MacInnes her enormous audience

"When Evil Wakes"

by August Derleth

A wonderful anthology with which to sit shivering in front of the fire. A collection of mystery stories each written by a master of the craft including Russell Wakefield's famous ghost story. "The Triumph of Death." The editor is an expert in his field.

"Zanzibar Intrigue"

by van Wyck Mason

A Negro CIA agent is being held prisoner on the island of Zanzibar, and G2 has assigned Colonel Hugh North to effect his escape. Another fast-paced novel of foreign intrigue and suspense by the author of the popular Colonel North series.

"The Shoes of the Fisherman"

by Morris L. West

One of the most extraordinary religious novels of the Twentieth Century — a story in depth of the modern Papacy, of a modern Pope; of men and women caught up in the most crucial moral and political dilemna of our time.

Facts About Fire

Parents tempted to leave small children alone for "just a minute" should stop and think — as these paren's did not:

A mother left three small children in the house while she posted a letter at a nearby mail box. She returned to find the house ablaze. The children could not be rescued.

A 6-year-old girl decided to heat a bottle for her baby brother. As she reached across the stove, her clothing was ignited and she was fatally burned. The mother was on a brief errand to the store.

Three small children were fatally burned in a fire that broke out during the time they were alone while their mother took another child ito a school bus stop.

Always remember: Fire needs just moments to do its deadly work, and children left alone are easy victims.

Parents tempted to leave small Flammable Liquid Containers

A recent fire chiefs' convention warned against the use of plastic containers now on the market for storing gasoline. These containers have not been approved and are not to be used because of the danger of cracking open when dropped or disintegrating from heat.

Only an approved safety can (metal can with a spring type self-closing lid) should be used for flammable liquids. A safety can prevents accidental spilling and the spring lid acts as a relief valve to prevent bursting when exposed to heat.

It should go without saying that storage should be at a minimum and that all dispensing will be outdoors free from ignition sources.

Your Fire Department.

Money Gone? No Milk!

Several instances of cash and tokens being stolen from milk bottles have occurred in Griesbach during the past few weeks.

To curb this annoying practice, PMQ occupants are urged not to place milk bottles containing cash or tokens outdoors overnight.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Garden Competition

AUGUST 1964 RESULTS

The results of the August judging for the best gardens have been announced, and again the winners have attained a high aboveaverage standard particularly in the Class 1 PMQs.

The Chairman of the judging committee, Major D. Harrison, told the Griesbach Bugle that the competition was so close that in many cases gardens were eliminated for minor faults. ## RAMBLI

with Henry Owen

The world today is highly specialized, and everyone who is anyone is a specialist. It's considered blase to be anything else. It's an acknowledged trend.

And from all reports it will continue.

Already, professions once considered inviolable have knuckled under to the specialist- The tonsorial profession, for example, has branched out from the traditional corner barbershop to plush establishments bearing impressive and expensive names like "Antonio's Hair-Dressing Salon for the Natty Man", and "Monsieur Pompadour's". In these aromatic parlours one no longer finds barbers! Instead there is a hodge-podge of hair sylists and color specialists. Anyone walking into these ultra-modern sites asking for a (ugh) haircut is automatically met with derisive stages and eternally pegged a clod before being ejected. When all barbers eventhally switch over I suppose we clods will just have to revert to the bowl and shears with the little woman in attendance.

With an eye to the future, one can fore-see, with a reasonable degree of accuracy, a variety of predicaments likely to arise due to specialization. Imagine a housewife's frustration after walking into a shoe repair shop for new soles and heels and finding out the proprietor specializes in heels only. Or going to a bakery for rye bread and they only make white. And medical care.... You think doctors today are specialized? Twenty years from now it may be necessary to see three different doctors after tripping over your shoelace. One for the knee abrasion, another for the cut on your pinky and a chiroprantor for your wrenched thumb.

And it gets worse.... Couples contemplating marriage will have to be more compatible than ever before or their courtship may never get off the ground. If a beau intended taking his girl out to eat and she preferred ravioli while he wanted pizza — well — they just may meet new mates while dining alone in their respective restaurants.

A Span of History

In 1919 at a farewell parade at Bramshott Camp, England, the young Princess Patricia placed a Wreath of Laurel in silver gilt (left) on the original Colour of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry as a token of her pride and admiration in the Regiment. As Colonel-in-Chief of the unit she had designed and presented the Colour to the PPCLI 50 years ago.

The Wreath of Laurel bore the inscription:

TO THE P.P.C.L.I. FROM THE COLONEL-IN-CHIEF, PATRICIA, IN RECOGNITION OF THEIR HEROIC SERVICES IN THE GREAT WAR, 1914-1918.

In the history of the British Armies there is record of two wreaths only being presented to a regiment. One was presented to the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in 1919 and one to the South Wales Borderers (24th Regiment) in 1880.

On August 10th at Iserlohn, Germany, as part of the Jubilee ceremonies she decorated the Colour of the 1st Battalion, PPCLI, with a replica of the Wreath of Laurel (right). Assisting was Maj.-Gen. C. B. Ware, Colonel of the Regiment.

She will also decorate the Colour of the 2nd Battalion, PPCLI, during the ceremony of trooping the Colour September 19th at Hamilton Gault Barracks, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Hard Road to Victory

by Col. G. R. Stevens

unskilled labour. Men needed only to know how to march and to shoot and to conform to simple mili ary habits. As a result Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, raised in nine days out of veteran recruits, was on its way to Britain with'in a month and was in France, as an elemen' of a regular British division, before the end of the year.

There the Regiment was blooded in the Ypres salient, on battlefields already churned to sludge. On May 8th, 1915, it took the full shock, losing ten officers and 392 men in a single day's savage fighting. Already it had lost one colonel killed in action and Hamilton Gault, who had raised it at his own expense for the service of the Crown, had been wounded twice.

More than a year passed in holding the line, sometimes in sectors on the French front. During this period the Universities Companies, raised and trained at McGill, provided 1,500 reinforcements; the old sweats and the college boys got on well together. Then back to the Canadian Corps at Ypres. In bitter fighting on Tune 2nd, 1916, in Sanctuary Wood another colonel died on the parapet and Hamilton Gault lost a leg. Only four officers and less than 200 men answered rollcall next day.

In the great battle which raged for five months on the Somme, a brisk victory at Courcellette (September 15th), a repulse at Regina Trench (October 8th), cost another 400 officers and men. But on Easter Monday 1917 everything went by clockwork and the Patricias were in the van of the assault that hurled the enemy from Vimy Ridge. Throughout that sum- victory.

In 1914 soldiering was mostly mer inconclusive fighting around Lens took a substantial toll; that autumn it was north to the Salient once more, to a great battle in the mud. In the last days of October the Regiment again lost more than 400 men, half of them dead on a few acres of shell-tossed terrain. Two Victoria Crosses testified to valour beyond praise

> Thereafter the Patricias, like the remainder of the Canadian Corps, held an increasing length of line while the other Commonwealth formations took the full shock of the enemy's final desperate bids for victory. They thus were spared to open the last hundred days of the war in the Amiens breakthrough. Ludendorff declared August 8th to have been "the black day of the German Army"; that afternoon Hamilton Gault rode up to cheer his men advancing across open country, after four years of trenches. But the enemy died hard and at Parvillers a young sergeant won a third Victoria Cross for the Regiment when he gave his life to cover the extrication of his company. At Cambrai a third Pairicia colonel, a man who had become a myth in his lifetime, was killed in an assault which cost the Regiment 60% of its effectives. Forty officers and men died at a single gap in the wire.

Before dawn on November 11th 1918 the Patricias were working their way cautiously up a broad boulevard leading to the centre of Mons. Of a sudden the carillons began to rock their steeples with "It's a Long Way to Tipperary". It had been a long way to Mons. Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry had left 4,000 officers and men - 80% of its total strength - strewn along the hard road to

Lady Patricia Ramsay Presents Colours to the Second Battalion PPCLI, at Calgary, Alberta September, 1953

COLONEL IN CHIEF

In August of 1914, Princess Patricia of Connaught, daughter of the Governor-General of Canada and grand-daughter of Queen Victoria, gave her name to the Regiment of Infantry raised by Andrew Hamilton Gault. This year is the Jubilee of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and the Regiment is honoured to still be in service to Lady Patricia Ramsay, as she is now known, and to its Country.

Fifty years ago Princess Patricia designed, created and presented the Original Colour. In 1918, following four hard years of war during which time she was a constant inspiration to her Regiment, she decorated her Colour with a Wreath of Laurel in silver gilt bearing the inscription:

"To the PPCLI from the Colonel-in-Chief, PATRICIA, in recognition of their haroic services in the Great War, the parade square at the Hamilton Gault Barracks

Now, in 1964 Lady Patricia Ramsay is to present a replica of the Wreath of Laurel to the Regiment following the Trooping the Colour Ceremony at Hamilton Gault Barracks, September 19th. For fifty years through war and peace Lady Patricia has taken an intense interest in the life of her Regiment and has, upon numerous occasions reviewed her Regiment in the United Kingdom, Canada and West Germany. Lady Patricia will be accompanied on her visit to the Second Battlion of her Regiment by her husband Admiral Sir A. R. M. Ramsay, GCVO, KCB, DSO.

The Founder of the Regiment

Brigadier A. Hamilton Gault, DSO, ED, CD, Founder of the Regiment. Brig. Gault, one of Canada's most notable soldiers served with distinction in the South African War before returning to private business in Montreal. Upon the outbreak of World War I he raised at his own expense Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and proceeded overseas as their second in command. Thrice wounded, Brigadier Gault won the first DSO to be awarded to a Canadian in the war and by splendid personal leadership inspired the entire Regiment throughout four bitter years of fighting. Upon a number of occasions he commanded the Regiment and following the Armistice he brought the Regiment home to Ottawa.

In the intervening years Brig, Gault lived in England and represented Taunton in the British House of Commons from 1924 to 1935. He was an extremely active man although supposedly handicapped by a wooden leg. Amongst his many endeavours he played squash, hunted and piloted his own aircraft. He was recalled to service in the Second World War and promoted to the rank of Brigadier.

Brigadier Gault was appointed Honourary Lieutenant Colonel of the Patricia's in 1920, Honourary Colonel in 1948 and in 1958 was appointed Colonel of the Regiment shortly before his death. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dorothy B. Gault, who will be attending all the Jubilee Ceremonies as an honoured guest of the Battalion.

Colonel of the Regiment

MAJOR GENERAL C. B. WARE

Major General C. B. Ware, DSO, CD, Colonel of the Regiment. Maj. Gen. Ware was commissioned into the PPCLI in 1935 and served with the Regiment almost continuously until 1947. He commanded the Patricia's in Sicily and Italy and received he Distinguished Service Order for gallantry and leadership at the crossing of the Moro River in Italy.

Maj. Gen. Ware has held a number of Staff appointments and has commanded 1 CIBG and 4 CIBG. He is at present Commandant of the National Defence College in Kingston. On October 2nd, 1959, Maj. Gen. Ware was appointed the Colonel of the Regiment. The Second Battalion is honoured to have Maj. Gen. Ware, a most distinguished Patricia, attending all the Jubilee Celebrations.

Editor's Note: Cpl. J. M. Cowan one would need a "minimum of is a member of 56 Canadian In- four days-" fantry Workshop, Egypt, and has written several articles on his adventures during his Middle East posting. Cpl. Cowan submitted the following article to the Griesbach Bugle last month.

It was early when we arrived over Pisa and peering through the window of the giant 'Yukon' aircraft, I could see the first glow of of dawn outlining the majesty of the Apuan Alps against the morn-

The first leg of my posting to the Middle East was nearing completion, the openning of the door to adventure! Here, in Pisa, we would spend twenty - four hours before flying on to El Alarish and the Gaza 'strip'.

"Rest." we were told. "and recuperate from the rigors of altitude cuperate for the rigors of altitude and the many hours lost due to the change in time." However, headed directly for the most famrest was farthest from my mind and ous attraction in Pisa, the 'Square from the comments of the sleepy heads around me, I wasn't alone be a little, because what else inn my feelings. Oh, there would be a little, because what else can you do at five in the morning, even in Italy? I'd bet my duffel that the opening of the shops would see every Canadian on the plane on the Streets of Pisa.

The hotel which caters to the United Nations troops was a surprisingly modern one, and the room which another soldier and I were assigned, was very clean, and American in its furnishings.

Not that I expected anything medieval, for Pisa is one of the more popular tourist centres of Italy. The price, printed on a card and tacked to the inside of the door, attested to that: Wow!

Forgetting to leave a 'call' at the desk and oversleeping because of it, I had to rush to make breakfast on time. The continental serving of thick, black coffee, crisp rolls, farm fresh butter and marmalade, was a refreshing change from our heavy Canadian breakfasts and I didn't want to miss it.

Later, there was the matter of changing some of my money into lira and planning my Stinerary for the day.

Changing money in Italy is as easy as eating spaghetti. If one has patience, he can even bargain for the best price, although the difference is probably not worth the effort.

began by saying that to really

How, I wondered, could I ever hope to see it in the six, or seven hours of daylight left to me. Best to tour only the most outstanding attractions and later, perhaps on one of my subsequent leaves, give the town the attention it deserved.

"To start", continued the little book, "proceed to some well defined landmark and using that as a hub, move out from there."

Pisa, like so many ancient cities in Italy and in the rest of Europe for that matter, is composed of many narrow streets, which wind in all directions and suddenly, for no apparent reason, change their names. The tourist, and this from the book again, "should always secure a map of the location, obtainable in any of the numerous book stalls one encounters along the way."

With the hotel as my "hub", I of Miracles'. Here reposed the Leaning Tower and many other wonders, but first there was the main thoroughfare, called the 'Corso Italia', which held many attractions in itself.

The little 14th Century Church of St. Domenic, although closed to tourists because of extensive repairs, has a most beau'iful facade, worthy of a long look.

Further on, the Church of St. Maria Del Carmine, built in the 14th century and containing such artis ic treasures as the 'Madonna with Child and Saints', and the Ascension', by Allori.

Halting midway across a bridge over the river Arno, I watched a fisherman leisurely laying his nets, reflecting on how little this had changed over the centuries.

My thoughts, by now, were entirely immersed in this lovely place. My feet loath to leave each new discovery.

The Church of St. Michael in the Hamlet, dating from the tenth century, the Palace of Knight's and the Church of St. Stephens in the central square, sent my imagin-

At long last, coming from the deep shadow of a Roman arch, I entered into the 'Square of Miracles' and quickly forgot all that had gone before.

Surely there is no more imposing sight in all Italy, and how very aptly named!

On my left, were the more prominent landmarks, the Leaning Tower, the Baptistery and the My first purchase, a guide book, Cathedral, its magnificent while marble exterior gleaming in the appreciate this picturesque town, afternoon sun. (Cont'd on pege 13).

On my right and no less imposing, were the Monumental Cemetery and the Opera Museum Pal-

Choosing the Tower as a first to tour, I was immediately assailed by a multitude of post card salesmen, who bore down on me from every direction.

Of course, since they all had identical cards, 'it didn't really matter which one I bought from, but just to be obstinate, for I was rather peeved with the crowding tactics, I selected the last to reach me and was sorry afterwards, for his cards were grease-stained and shopworn.

The 'Tower', dating from the 11th century and boasting a popularity few other monuments can claim, is magnificent indeed and after climbing the winding stairs, 187 feet to the top, it was more than just pausing to get my breath, that kept me rooted to the spot!

I had the horrible feeling that one step towards the leaning edge would cause the tower to lean that much more, until overbalanced, and then topple. Finally, as I was just on the point of turning and retracing my steps, a young Italian girl squeezed past and strolled casually to the edge. Naturally my manhood demanded diately reached into my pocket, dark, the street changed names,

The sensation was a little like peering over the edge of a precipice and I can't deny I wasn't frightened, but the panorama of Pisa, the surrounding country, mountains and sea, did much to assuage my fear. Here too Galileo must have stood when carrying out his experiments on the physical properties of the fall of weights.

Next in line to visit, was the great Cathedral and as I entered the massive, beautifully wrought door and proceeded toward the High Altar and Pulpit by 'Pisano', I was overcome by a feeling of religious adoration such as I've seldom known.

Here I spent most of the afternoon going from one magnificent treasure to the next, so that I lost all track of time.

From the Cathedral, hurrying because of a darkening sky, I continued to the Baptistery.

Dedicated to John the Baptist, the monument is surely unequaled for its elaborate marble decoration and is a treasure trove of Lombard and Pisan sculpture and

By emitting a number of sounds such as Do, Sol, Mi, at the top of one's lungs, (he had awfully big lungs for such a little man) the resonance of the echo blends the sounds together, obtaining a chord whinh would put an organ to shame.

The demonstration was well worth the few lira I gave him!

The sun had set by the time I'd left the Baptistery, but still I didn't want to return to the hotel without having seen the last of the more famous attractions on the Square, the Monumental Ceme-

A long marble enclosure, erected to contain the tombs lying in the Square, it is a vast graveyard of long ago personages who had built around them and over them, many impressive works of art from delicate statuary of nymphs, gargoyles, cherubs and angels, to life size frescoes covering complete walls.

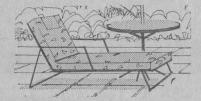

It was a mistake taking a different route back to the hotel. Somewhere along the way it got the word 'taxi' is international!

Freeze Meat in zero zone

Everyone who owns a freezer keeps meat in it. And a growing number are freezing jam.

Freeze meat promptly at zero degrees or lower. If your refrigerator or freezer is not capable of maintaining a temperature of 0 degrees F. do not attempt to freeze meat in it. (Use it only to store meat already frozen).

Did you ever have a sandwich for breakfast? A sandwich of French Toast slices and bananas is too good to keep just for breakfast. To make it, prepare the slices of French Toast the usual way. Butter one slice while hot, top with slices of banana and another slice of toast. Pour maple-flavoured syrup over the sandwich.
